A: The data is right there in your file. You just need to find the correct line to extract that string. The first string that starts with the pound sign and is the number that starts with "1" is the key to your puzzle:

```
ga.Import(@"C:\file.csv", Missing.Value, "", "", Missing.Value, Missing.Value, Missing.Value, Missing.Value, Missing.Value, Missing.Value, Missing.Value, Missing.Value, Missing.Value); var a = (from line in ga.Lines() where line.StartsWith("1") select line); string sequence = a.First().Substring(3, 6); // yields "132454462"

This will get the first number that is a string of 6 characters starting with "1". From there, it's a simple matter of string parsing.

Q: Can I add "Rationale" for edits I performed on a post? A lot of edits are not showing "rationale" in the edit history, but how can I find them to add "rationale"? Can I find them by searching for a particular string? A: You should be able to find them by clicking the 3 dots by your username on the top of the edit history page. Or, if it is a repeated edit (which could have been intended as a single edit), you can click the revisions tab (the one with the date, number of revisions, and commit messages) and search for the revision ID and remove it from there.

A: There is no way to get them, those are specifically not shown to you. You can go to the revision history of the post and find the revision where you made an edit. Then you can remove those revisions (by clicking on the Edit link) to remove them from the revisions history. This will not remove the edit from your post though. If you think an edit was incorrectly applied, you can flag the post for moderators to review if you think it was not appropriate
