

The third in a series of the Elden Ring RPG is here! This game features an original story, and is the culmination of all the things that have come before. A game that's as easy to play as it is fun to explore. • A Timeless Classic Story Unlike other games, the progression of this game has been kept classic and simple. The large number of game content in the first part of the game has been reduced to two, and the story has been set up in such a way that it can be continued even after beating the game. • A Unique Game Where You All Play Together In addition to a campaign map that takes place in the Lands Between, the game can be played online and, thanks to a "viewing effect" in the honor system, you can all take part in the same event together. • The unprecedented action battle system, the extensive customization of weapons and equipment, and the exciting gameplay that allows you to enjoy an experience packed with both action and RPG style, create an experience that will captivate your soul. • An Unrivaled Fantasy Action RPG The Elden Ring 3 provides an epic fantasy action RPG experience that includes a variety of original events and wild battles that won't be found in any other RPG. Characters who are limited in number can cooperate with others and play together in the same party. • An Engaging Adventure Being Played Together with Others The game can be played easily and provides a sense of rhythm and dynamism. It is possible to form a party by combining characters, and you can enjoy the action and fight together. What's to Come? Tag Archives: dinner In the past I've spoken about my love/hate relationship with the recipe box. I love collecting recipes and seeing how they evolve. I love the ritual of planning meals and whether I'll make them or not. I love the idea of 'fantastical meals'. But, I've gotten to the point where I have thousands of recipes, and I have no energy left to sort through them to find the ones that will never happen, let alone cook. Every year I make a list of the dinners I want to make. I realize that as much as I love collecting recipes, I've also got to build a repertoire of dinners that I can plan weeks in advance and then execute without thought. I feel like I start getting really grumpy if I spend five hours on a dinner that I know I'll be too exhausted to even enjoy. So this year, I've decided to channel my need for routine and rule keeping by trying to cook at least two new dinners every week. Sure, it'll take a lot of work to be able to keep it up for a while, but I figure if I can stick to the plan for a few months, I'll make it easier. Here's how I plan to do it. In the comments below, I'd love to hear your thoughts or questions. Next week, we're doing a HUGY dinner and it will be so much fun. You're going to have tacos, chocolate dip, salsa and of course, cheese! I've got all of the details below - we're so excited!! Raise your hand if you love salsa, cheese and chocolate and all things taco-like! As if I'm not already on top of the world on this lovely Wednesday, I just made a delicious lunch - and I almost want to take it home! We made two baked goods - this lovely fig and rosemary scones, and a brownie. I love rosemary! I asked Tommy to cut the figs in half and then I made two sauces - one for the brownies and one for the scones. I've used these ingredients for both in the past - I love the combination of sour and sweet, making them perfect for when you want something to sweet but also have a hit
