Petals is a game about venturing into adventure in a beautiful flower world. Explore the endless wilds and vast seascapes and discover what happens when you pick up a magnificent pink flower! From the developers of Flowertale: At an early age, the King, who wanted to create a flower of his own, ordered the townspeople to gather all the flowers in the forest. However, the forest was so dense with flowers that all the people could not manage to gather them all. The King ordered his army to capture all the flowers. Because many soldiers got killed and many people got hurt, the King became mad at the townspeople and threw them into jail. A young boy who lived near the forest heard about the disturbance and came to the forest to see the flowers. There he found a pink flower. The flower was so beautiful and captivating that the boy picked it up. Then the flower and the boy immediately entered a journey together. ----- Want to hear more about Flowertale or Petals? + Reputation Wars? May 17, 2009 · 12 min read A Quick Note Before You Continue This is a post made very casually, without much thought. While I will be disagreeing with a lot of people over the last few months, for the sake of civility, and assuming I have all the information necessary to express my points, I will not be resorting to name calling, insults, attacking people personally, or breaking the law. All the comments I will make in this post are just my opinion (for the most part), and to express how I feel about the consensus, and about the game in general. The people I will be commenting on this are very knowledgeable and well respected individuals on the competitive Smash scene, I am in no way trying to bring them down or to "not listen" to them. But lets get into it. The two clans, ui_chaos are working their tail off to flood the scoreboard. They are doing good work with it, but need to work on teching. Their team work is also not very good, as was already noticeable in Generals. Right now ui_chaos has an estimated 2630 points on the scoreboard. With those points, they have virtually no chance of winning any tournament if people work against them and specifically target their teams. One thing that got me really interested about the two clans was that since Chad went with his team, and thus was removed from the tournament, ui_chaos as a whole has been performing decently in the seeding bracket (at the very beginning of this year after the presales ended). Then come up the December Team Tournament. The biggest thing I noticed was that while ui_chaos has held up well against fellow teams like ui_rere/kill_a_chaotic, or nave/matts, they did not perform well against Alien 8, or Kings of Smash. Alien 8 has been a relatively weak team, especially in recent weeks, while Kings of Smash has been stronger lately, but still usually sittings on 700ish points or less. After both tournaments, ui_chaos and alien 8 ended up in the top seeds for the Seeding bracket. And due to how hard they fought with the other clan, they ended up in seeding 3 and 4 respectively, but the winners bracket seeded winners bracket 5. Meanwhile, Kings of Smash has received a major setback, and is now

Leading article {#sec1} ===== The discovery of massive parallel gRNA libraries was a major breakthrough in CRISPR/Cas9 editing. The widespread use of these libraries enabled a rapid pace of introducing mutations into mammalian genomes. Nonetheless, they are not perfect. As shown in [bib1], one of the major issues for *in vitro* cell-based systems was that library bias could influence the resulting mutagenic spectrum. Although the accuracy of using *in vitro* gRNA libraries for genome editing could be promising in some cases, the robustness remains to be established. In a recent paper published in *eLife*, [bib2] present data suggesting a bottleneck in the CRISPR/Cas9 genome editing process. They report that the use of *in vitro*-selected gRNAs did not lead to the expected increases in the incidence of mutations in targeted regions of the mammalian genome. Instead, they show that the selected gRNAs generate a mutagenic spectrum biased to repeat sequences, such as transposons. This creates concerns about the robustness and reproducibility of the use of *in vitro*-selected libraries for genome editing. In the study of [bib2], very few gRNAs were tested *in vivo*. Therefore, the library source is not a concern as long as every single gRNA was selected from a population. On the other hand, the gRNAs tested *in vitro* were introduced in an extrachromosomal plasmid, which could lead to false-positive results. A major issue in the study of [bib2] is that, at least to our knowledge, they used 5'-phosphate-dependent crRNAs. These crRNAs have a heterogenous
